Victoria Memorial Hall

presents

Behind the Scenes
Best Practices in Collections Preservation

an illustrated lecture by

Emily Klayman Jacobson
Paper & Photographs Conservator
Freer Gallery of Art and Arthur M. Sackler Gallery
Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

Friday, 26 October 2018, 5:30 pm
Conference Hall (New Library Building)

Museums are much more than places to go for weekend entertainment. Museums can include collections that tell the story of a culture, a place or a time in history. Their materials—whether they are paintings, prints, drawings, sculptures, textiles, photographs, or architecture (to name a few)—need care to help them last for as long as possible. This lecture illustrates what steps museum staff must take to enable their collections to be preserved for future generations. One might even pick up a few tips for preserving their own family heirlooms.

Entry through East Gate (opposite St. Paul's Cathedral) only Cars are not allowed inside the Victoria Memorial Hall campus
Admission on first-cum-first served basis till hall fills up